

Scott Nesbitt

scott@scottnesbitt.net

<http://www.scottnesbitt.net>

PROFILE:

- Wrote over 200 articles, essays, and reviews for a variety of publications and Web sites.
- Prepared technical reports and white papers for an independent information service.
- Extensive experience writing user manuals, administration and developer guides, marketing materials, and training guides.
- Able to write clearly and concisely, and to make complex concepts easy to understand.
- High degree of comfort with technical material.

WRITING EXPERIENCE:

Freelance Writer (May, 1990 - Present)

- Contributed articles, essays, and reviews to publications throughout North America. The publications I've written for include The Globe and Mail, The Toronto Star, Smart Computing, Newsforge.com, InformIT.com, and Link Up.
- Wrote a series of TechTips for Geeks.com.
- Wrote and updated technical reports for Faulkner Information Services.
- Wrote documentation and marketing copy for a number of companies in Canada and the U.S, including:
 - TSX Technologies
 - PeopleSoft
 - JD Edwards
 - uptime software
 - 724 Solutions
 - Avokia Inc.

About.com, Internet Appliances Guide (July, 2000 - September, 2001)

- Wrote articles, developed a product encyclopedia, and compiled a glossary of terms for the Internet Appliances sub-site on the About.com network.
- Published a weekly newsletter, and maintained a set of topical links.

CBC Radio, Part-Time Feature Reporter, Toronto, Ontario (July, 1993 - May, 1994)

- Contributed interviews and commentaries to the program Brand X -- this included developing story ideas, narrowing the focus of each piece, doing research and interviews, writing scripts, and recording voice-overs at the CBC's studio in Toronto.

MISCELLANEOUS:

What can't be captured on a resume is my sheer level of enthusiasm for writing about various topics and working with technology. I'm told that I can make seemingly boring topics and ideas interesting, and can quickly complete assignments no matter how complex.

EDUCATION:

Bachelor of Applied Arts, Journalism, Ryerson University (September, 1986 - May, 2000)

PUBLICATIONS:

You can view a list of my published work at <http://www.scottnesbitt.net/credits.html>.